What specifically did you like/dislike about the in-person class sessions? And why?

I liked the interaction between all the students, and the ability to learn from them all. Everyone had some different perspectives to add and it was quite eye opening. I would have liked to have been able to prepare a bit more before the first class, in terms of having the material available ahead of time so we could have had that read. I thought the different break out group ideas (snowball, ideas on large paper etc) were very good and varied. Maybe "forcing" us to change seating each session would help us experience more "uncomfortableness" in a safe way and be good for us! It helped m ...

How beneficial did you feel the online learning strategies (Wimba, discussion forum, AsuLearn) were for your learning?

What specifically did you like/dislike about the online formats? And why?

the discussion forum was amazingly awesome. I appreciated the ability to be able to read all the other responses whether I had posted yet or not, although i really tried not to, so I could answer originally firsts. I liked that the people in the class continued to discuss throughout the week, instead of just the required answers and 1 reply. I learned a lot from these comments. The wimba was okay, but it was hard to follow and was a bit too long for one stretch. But it wasn't horrible and if I had to do it again, it'll be fine. AsULearn was good; it helps to have the material ahead of ...

At what time(s) during the class (either in-person or online) did you feel most comfortable and most engaged discussing the course content? Why?

I felt most comfortable during the discussion forums, because I could do it at my timing, without the pressure of people looking at me and having to know exactly what I wanted to say at the moment. With writing, I could take my time, check it over and think through things on my own. I don't feel like I do well thinking on my feet. At the same time, I really enjoyed the in person discussions, being able to hear and see others and be involved in those times and I didn't really feel too much pressure to have to speak. Hopefully, that won't be reflected too badly in my grade. Both the times ...

At what time(s) during the course (either in person or online) did you feel most UNcomfortable and most DISengaged from the course content? Why?

the wimba was hard to stay focused on and there was a class when I had not finished all the reading so I felt like I couldn't really participate well and was uncomfortable with that. I did not feel uncomfortable at all During the presentations, I felt like some were dragged out a bit too long. This is tough, as I found the whole course engaging. I think if I had to choose a particular thing that made me uncomfortable, it was the discussion boards. Sometimes it was difficult to understand the questions or people's responses to them, or sometimes it was hard to write an answer when someone els ...

What about the class surprised you the most?

realizing just how much I don't know about diversity and hadn't even thought much about. I learned that I was not a well diverse person as I erroneously thought. The variety of backgrounds and the different programs everyone was involved with made me think about the value the diversity class could offer. I guess I was surprised at how much baggage I carried coming into the class that I didn't know about. Biases and feelings about past experiences came to light that I hadn't really dealt with, but I am glad I did. So I guess I am surprised at how cathartic the class was for me :) Learning that so ...

What piece(s) of the final project were most beneficial to you? Why?

it was a really hard final project to do piece by piece and it wasn't until I was working on the final presentation that I felt like it all came together and I understood much more about the purpose of the assignment. That being said, the entire thing was very beneficial and helpful as a whole. So i guess I have to say the final presentation part was the part that helped me the most. I had a hard time figuring out where to go to observe and to be a minority and to interview, since i really did think I had experienced it more than the norm. But it was good to work through it and it has ch ...

In this course, I found the content to be.....

enlightening, interesting, and surprising. definitely made me think and reflect a lot about myself and my practices as a teacher and my school. very enlightening and thought provoking. It facilitated my change. Engaging and thought-provoking challenging, enlightening, thorough Very interesting. Being from an area that does not have very much ethnic diversity doesn't mean that diversity doesn't exist. It's there just in many different ways. Do we have gays/lesbians? Probably but I don't know of any, would I treat them any differently if I knew they were? No I don't think so. Intriguing, a ...

In this course, I found the instructor to be.....

very fun, intelligent, at times a bit too easy going (the first class as people asked questions about deadlines and missing classes etc., you would mention that it doesn't matter; it's nice that you're so flexible, but it also sent a message (at least to me) of not quite as professional. (more like you weren't sure of yourself and you really are a great professor, you should be more sure of yourself!) very approachable, friendly, enthusiastic. A great instructor. prepared and knowledgeable well informed, engaging, helpful. She was very very interesting. She has been in lots of the situation ...

Additional Comments (optional)

Thank you very much for being so flexible in allowing this class to work in a hybrid format and in such a short amount of time. You really did an excellent job. (I was going to say phenomanal, but wasn't sure of spelling! as you can tell :) thanks I came into this class having no idea what to expect, but am really glad I had the opportunity to participate! Thanks for a good experience! Great class. This should be a class that is in undergrad classes for teacher education if it's not. Wonderful Course! Thank you. Great course!
